

Stephen Ralph

Stephen Ralph has spent more than 10 years as director of anti-poverty initiatives at Evansville Christian Life Center in Evansville, Indiana. Born in Missouri and raised in Southern California, Stephen moved to Indiana in 2008 and has called that state home for 15 years. Stephen grew up in generational poverty and has spent time homeless, so he knows firsthand what it's like to live a life in poverty. Since then, he has turned his life around. He is a classically trained musician, has worked as a healthcare professional for 15 years, and is a consultant for aha! Process.

Stephen's aha! moment came in 2008 when he was homeless. That was also during the Great Recession. With the help of community, he emerged stronger, and he became determined to do what he could to address and tackle the problem of poverty in the United States.

"We must have the courage to listen and understand the challenges of poverty so we can address it at every level and create a future," Stephen says.
