"In 2005, one of my campus administrators offered me her autographed copy of A Framework for Understanding Poverty. 'You get this. It's what you do. I want to send you to become a trainer,' she said. I had no idea that the pages of the book would speak to me in such a deep way, or that after working and presenting in several local districts for 10 years, that I would find myself on the aha! Process team. I have been growing in my belief that life is a
